

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A charitable organization funding and member benefit program to include an organization that receives donations that are tax deductible from members who commit to, payment of dues, regular donations of blood and may agree to the performance of services and donation of their usable organs at their death, to the organization. The member donation to provide the organization an insurable interest in each member that can be funded from the member dues and donations, which insurance proceeds can fund a burial plan for each member who meets their agreement to the organization during their life, with the organization to provide funeral and burial or cremation services to the member commensurate with the members actual contributions. The organization uses a computer to both maintain a running account of the members contribution and to maintain personal information about each member for aiding in blood and organ matching and for, as needed, locating and identifying members at the request of family or authorities.